Jane McCaw has been actively involved in the mining industry for 30+ years and has senior experience in both geology and land management. She is currently employed with New Gold at their New Afton Mine in both capacities. With her educational background in geological engineering, Ms. McCaw has held engineering and geological positions at mines such as Eskay Creek and the Sullivan Mine in British Columbia, as well as Hemlo, Detour Lake, and Hoyle Pond mines in Ontario. She has been an active member of Mine Rescue in Ontario and BC and has training in Incident Command Management.

Over her career in mining, Ms. McCaw has taken an interest in giving back to the mining industry. In the past, she was involved with the local branch of the CIM in Kimberley BC and gave mining presentations to elementary school classes to introduce children at a young age to the benefits of mining. She is a founding Director of the South-Central Branch of Women in Mining, as well as a member of the AME Land Access and Use Committee and the current President of the Kamloops Exploration Group.
